Subject: Marijuana Farms

To Whom It May Concern:

I would like to share my concerns in regard to Marijuana farms near communities and/or developments. Although Marijuana is legal to adults 21 or older, I feel it sends the wrong message to children and adolescents that are very impressionable: A message that Marijuana is harmless and no big deal. Research shows there are many possible negative effects associated with long-term use of Marijuana.

The legalization of Marijuana doesn't mean children, or for that matter adults that dislike the drug, need to be subjected to daily reminders such as the horrendous smell.

I feel strongly, as a parent of teenagers and an elementary child, that Marijuana farms growing nonchalantly around the community is unwittingly encouraging the use of a drug with many possible negative effects by our youth.

Stricter zoning laws requiring Marijuana farms to be well outside of communities and/or developments with high numbers of youth around or passing by daily is a win-win situation for both sides of the controversy.

Thank you for your time,

James Caddy
