I felt the need to write one more letter to shed some light on one operation. My husband and I used to own the land that the Empire Experience is located on. It went through 2 more owners before being sold to the current owners. We developed this land into an alfalfa field, and while doing this my husband struck up a friendship with Mark Brazil. His property bordered ours and he had a small alfalfa field and also a house on it. Tragedy struck when Mark suffered a fatal heart attack before his young daughter reached her 1st birthday. My husband helped out Shawn that year to get her crop harvested. Shawn and Marsie have continued to live there, but now they cannot enjoy their property at all and are unable to keep it up because of the smell. Marsie doesn't feel safe to even go outside by herself. How would anyone like to put up with loud music being played constantly and garbage that ends up on your property, and of course, the smell.

We feel so badly for Shawn and Marsie and wish we had never sold the land next to them. Shawn is somewhat afraid of retaliation if she speaks out too much. Please take into consideration what this is doing to innocent people.

Sincerely,
