Hello again

One more thing. 2 years ago spoke to an employee of the liqueur control board who regulates marijuana farms in the state, this person stated that Okanogan County was one of the most lenient counties in the state for the growth of marijuana. He also stated that the Country Commissioners had the ultimate authority to create the local rules for this. He felt sorry for us. I think this is one reason why they are all want to come to our county to grow it. Some other counties ran them out.

Please let me know if you have received this message.

Thanks again

Hello Jim, Ray, and Sheilah

High have a very high concern for the potential for growth of marijuana farms in our county. I live next to multiple operations that are already a burden on my family and neighbors. We all bought this property because it was in a good community with great local cattle farmers and orchardist in the area. I like and get along with them all, but with the marijuana farms moving in they have taken over some over the local hay ground and these people are unpleasant to be around. I have never seen some of these people before and the ones that I do know are known to be untrustworthy, therefore we don't feel comfortable letting our kids enjoy the outdoors on their own throughout the neighborhood. We have a bus stop within 500 feet of one of the operations that also makes us feel uncomfortable about sending our kids to the bus stop unsupervised. I'm not sure about others but as I grew older in school; walking to and from the bus stop was part of growing up and a privilege, now our kids don't have that option. There are many more issues that I could keep going on and on about, but I hope you all can get point that I am trying to get across. Please make it tougher for these growers to move into residential neighborhoods, keep this county know for what is know for, not for marijuana. I have lived here my inter life and I love it here as do many others that are not pro marijuana and I would like to stay here without having to live amongst marijuana.

Many of us will be at the hearing on the 28th

Thanks for your consideration
